Synopsis

The world of Sensicry is caught in an intermittent war with the demigod Malachi. While he slumbers, for 200 years at a time, there is peace. When heâ™s awake the Sencryians send seven avatars to fight him in games overseen by the war gods. If the avatars fail, Sensicry is enslaved by Malachi. If they defeat him, Malachi becomes a slave to their world. The outcome persists until the demigod leaves for another 200 years of rest. This cycle has played out again and again throughout millennium. Malachi never used to lose the war. Then the war gods handicapped him by giving him a sexual appetite and the capacity to fall in love. He became fixated on Jace, the avatar from the most prominent country of Sensicry. Every time Jace is reincarnated to fight for his land heâ™s forced to accept his destiny: he is the BelovÃ©d of their enemy. The avatar Jace is reincarnated as a peasant and the royalty abandon him to keep Malachi from finding him. â^Janisâ™ has no idea heâ™s actually the avatar of his territory. All he knows is that heâ™s been obsessed with Malachi all his life. Malachi is canâ™t live without his BelovÃ©d. The more desperate he gets, the more he vows to punish Jace for making him suffer!

Customer Reviews

I really, really liked "BelovÃ©d 4490"---and I have to be honest, here: I wasn't expecting to. I tend to be very picky about the kind of yaoi I like (though I will usually read any yaoi that's given to me just because there just isn't enough of it in the world generally speaking), and I've found I don't really take to non-sequential stories very often. The problem, I think, is that each story has to be able to stand on its own and give information that the other stories have not. Which means that each story has to have some basic information that's in every story, but also give the reader new thrills so they don't think they've just read the same story twice when it's supposed to be two separate ones.

BelovÃ©d is non-sequential, meaning it isn't written in chronological order and even the chronology skips hundreds of years at a time. When I started "BelovÃ©d 4490", I didn't know what the numbers in the title meant, but I quickly learned that they represent the story's year and are therefore important to the title. (There's also "BelovÃ©d 5860" and "BelovÃ©d 3956", and I suspect there will eventually be more chapters set in other years as well.) The obvious reason why the stories are set so far apart in time is because Malachi, the warlord, sleeps for 200 years at a time. During his slumber, the world he dominates is at peace. When he wakes up, he fights seven avatars of the planet in war games; if he wins, he rules the planet until he sleeps again. If he loses, he becomes a slave. He always won, so the war gods that oversee the games gave him "a sexual appetite and the capacity to fall in love". He becomes fascinated with Jace, the avatar from the world's most prominent country.
