Promises Of The Heart: Western Romance (Leap Of Love Series Book 5)

Synopsis

Beau and Boyd are twins and the babies of the Abbott Clan. They have struck off on their own, leaving South Carolina, the only home they have ever known. First stop, Arizona, where they are sworn in as U.S. Marshals. Boyd hits his stride, finds a home, and starts a family. Beau, on the other hand, is still looking for the life that he wants. Moving on to California, Beau takes an assignment, still searching for adventure and a home of his own. He settles in Pacific Lakes, where he is on assignment with the local sheriff's office. His first gig is undercover, to find out the details on the demise of bigwig, businessman, and landowner Robert Barnes. Barnes and his family practically built up the city of Pacific Lakes. The elections are impending, and Robert Barnes is a key figure in the city. Once he dies suddenly, his family is left reeling in the aftermath. No one is able to crack the case, leaving the family with unanswered questions. Beau is sure that he can help. But when he meets Barnes' twin daughters, he gets more than he bargained for. Billie is the quiet, easygoing one. Bobbie is the firecracker who immediately strikes Beau's attention. Will Bobbie and Beau give in to the feelings they share, or will Bobbie turn away from Beau because of the instability of his career as a lawman? Will Beau get the woman that he loves, or will he let love slip through his fingertips?

Customer Reviews

I read this entire series recently and liked the books Throughout the series, there seemed to be gaps, actions that didn't seem realistic in the circumstances within stories. But, I did like them and read all the ones that were on at that point. Now that I am reading the Morris Fenris series, Taking the High Road, I understand why. This entire series by Paige Powers mimics the Fenris books, plot, characters and story line. The location of the family plantation and surname of the brothers may have changed, along with the characters' first names, but the plot and main components, even the descriptions of the problem, character descriptions throughout the entire series by Powers so far is pretty much a copy of the Fenris series. Book 1-daughter of a madam returning from Switzerland, discovers parents died and receives inheritance and moves to CA to open a school. Pinkerton man involved as well as greedy fiancée. Book -Widower with a child rescues an Indian/Mexican girl who was kidnapped by man who bothers her daily at the town bazaar. Same thing continues with the next four books. If I remember correctly, Powers' are a tad gentler and without the use of cursing found in the Fenris books. The Powers books had more modern language that wouldn't have been used in that time period. Fenris books strongly exaggerate the Southern dialect, about to the point of being insulting to anyone of Southern descent. Overall, I did like the Powers books and had been looking forward to the stories of the rest of the brothers. However, given that each of the Powers books was released two to four months following the corresponding Fenris books, it really makes me question them and the authenticity of the author's (Powers) work.
