Customer Reviews

This is a clean sweet read a book of Christian values as the author bring us a touching story of the word of God with a budding romance between old childhood friends who had a misunderstanding that tore them apart. Years later they are still not talking when Caylor's father (Colt) has a heart attack he tells them he needs someone to leave the ranch to that the men will listen to and he would love to see his grandkids before he dies. His last request is for them to marry and give him grandkids to hold in his dying days. Caylor does not care for this idea and fights it but gives in and tells them to plan it she doesn't care what they do just to get it over with. Her father gave her the most beautiful wedding she has ever seen. She brought tears to his eyes when he saw her in her mother's wedding dress. When the groom (Stetson) sees his bride he is speechless. Caylor is a sweet Christian lady who loves the ranch and will do anything to protect it. She fell in love with Stetson since she was very young they were the best of friends when one day she when she went to him and they talked. She didn't like what he had to say turns to walk away and turns back drawing back her fist she hits him in the face. Her father was watching and dreaming about the day these two would marry. No one was more shock than he when he saw his daughter hit Stetson who has come to be like a son to him. From that day to this they haven't seen eye to eye. No one has ever said what happen that day and she sure isn't going to tell anyone. In truth she has love Stetson since he came to live with them and still does. He is always so unkind to her correcting her, being short tempered with only her and just truly unkind. She hates he will have to marry a woman he does not and will never love.
